

The John Gurche Poster Collection

Wholesale line sheet, September 2026

John Gurche has spent four decades reconstructing extinct life for the institutions that study it. His fifteen sculptures of early humans stand in the Smithsonian's David H. Koch Hall of Human Origins, on display since 2010. He painted the rearing Barosaurus that hangs in the American Museum of Natural History's Theodore Roosevelt Rotunda and the mural of Sue at the Field Museum, and has twice won the Society of Vertebrate Paleontology's Lanzendorf PaleoArt Prize.
